To our MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.—We announced some weeks ago that after the first of April we would increase the price of the Daily Journal to twelve dollars a year, and our country friends will please bear in mind to remit at that rate.

The Journal will be delivered by the mail to subscribers in any part of the city where a number sufficient to pay the expense of carriage will take it. Those persons desiring the Journal will please leave word at the office.

A HURRIED PROCEEDING.—The old gentleman was overtaken by a two-horse wagon in the Eastern District, to Louisville evening, and killed, proues to be John Jones, father of Shelton Jones, the well-known conductor on the Frankfort Rail road. It appears that the old gentleman had left home in the morning with his fishing-tackle, to enjoy a pleasant day of recreation. In returning from the pond on Mr. Edw. D. Redmond's premises, he met with a sudden and violent death, as stated by yesterday morning. The face of the old gentleman was strange to the residents of the Eastern District, as he bore no name or mark on his residence or Wessel street, between Main and Jefferson. The coroner was sent for, and an inquest held over the body. The jury was unable to learn the name of the deceased, and rendered a verdict to such effect. The age and respectable appearance of the unfortunate man, together with the fact of his having fishing-tackle in his possession, we think, should have suggested the idea to the coroner and jurors that he deceased was a resident of the city, possessed of friends interested in his welfare; and an effort should have been made to find out his residence, and furnish his friends some information in regard to his melancholy end.

Mr. Shelton Jones returned from Frankfort yesterday morning, and, on reaching home, found the household in a state of alarm in regard to the absence of the aged parent. They were unable to account for it, but hoped that he had stopped to spend the night with a friend. The morning wos on, and no tidings were heard of the missing one. The morning papers were laid upon the table, and the paragraph giving the particulars of the sad death of an old man, with name unknown, awakened the worst suspicions. Inquiries were started as to what disposition had been made of the body, when it was learned that the remains had been hurried with unseemly haste to a rude grave in the Jefferson street burying-ground immediately after the verdict of the coroner was rendered.

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

LETTER FROM JOHN BOTTE.—Among the selections from an autograph album of the Brooklyn (Long Island) Fair we find the following:

Auburn, Culpeper County, Va., February 21, 1864.—Sir: You must not infer, from the time that has elapsed since your letter was received, that I have been either unmindful of its objects or indifferent to the success of your cause. Your letter was accidentally mislaid, and I have regretted the address, which I hope will be received as a sufficient apology for my apparent inattention.

I happen to know something of the value of the United States Sanitary Commission and the arduous and Christian duties that devolve upon them, and for the past two months I have lived in a state of battle.

From the portion of my heart and my family have seen nine battles fought on my own soil, and but few of my own dear, honest, brave troops who have received it were boasting of a common descent, a common home, a common nationality, and a common death.

This is not the time nor the occasion to inquire how, by whom, or for what purpose this heavy calamity has been brought upon our country; but, as far as I am concerned, that, is, we have no such aspiring political demagogues in the land, who preferred their own interests to the interests of their country, who could have done so freely and humanely administered.

When I have seen a wounded soldier in the field, I have not stopped to ascertain whether he was a Union or a Confederate soldier; but, if he was a soldier, I have been enough for me to know that he was a disabled and suffering fellow—creatures to secure for him my sympathy and such comforts as I can give him. This is the spirit that has been the instinct of the United States Sanitary Commission. With the experience derived from personal observation, I cannot but appeal to every generous, upright, and Christian-like object to be affected by the association of which you are an organ, and, therefore, it affords me pleasure to contribute my mite to your cause, in this hour of trial, by contributing to your stations and comforts, which it is the purpose of the Sanitary Commission to supply, and which have always been so freely and humanely administered.

The steamer Y. Wilson from R. L. river, arrived at the port on yesterday morning, and was taken to the rear of the boat, and was soon on board, a deck-hand, was wounded. About the number of the guerrillas were seen in the stream opposite Grand Lake, Arkansas.
